A God with open arms

By William L. Trimyer
A' GOD WITH OPEN ARMS
Lesson for October 17, 1982
Bible Study Passages: Exodus 32:9-14; 34:5-9
INTRODUCTION

One of damning feelings we humans oftentimes live with is the feeling that we are unforgiven, unacceptable or unblessed. Throughout life we may be damned by parents, teachers and preachers. Some people go through life never receiving their parent's blessing. Struggle as we may, we somehow always manage to come up short of their expectations and blessing.

Forgiveness is the ability to accept someone as they are, not as we would like for them to be.

During the afternoon preceding his assassination Abe Lincoln signed a pardon for a soldier who had been sentenced to be shot for desertion. When asked why, Lincoln responded: "The boy can do more good above the ground than under the ground."

Perhaps we send too many people to their graves feeling unblessed and unforgiven. The story of the Prodigal son is exhibit A for a case for forgiveness. In this story the father is willing to bless even a failure. Our society is not geared to bless failures. We only bless successful people and those who play act the model roles.

Part of our problem stems from the fact that we spend too much time pointing out the monster in our children, our spouse, our friends and neighbors. As long as we continue to point out the monster in each other, we cannot forgive, bless and free one another to be the creature God intended us to be. This week's lesson focuses upon the freeing and forgiving spirit of God.

Moses Goes to Bat for Israel (Exodus 32:9-14)

Moses oftentimes found himself having to issue a plea for mercy on behalf of the rebellious Israelites. They had worshipped the golden calf and grumbled their way across the Sinai desert. God did not turn his head and ignore the seriousness of their sin.

When one reads Exodus 32:9-14, one gets the feeling that Moses was somehow able to manipulate God and show him the error of his ways. It appears that when Moses spoke God listened! When God said he had had enough of the misbehavior of the Israelites, and that he would unleash his anger upon them, Moses intervened and encouraged God to change his approach.

What this says is that while we may misbehave and sin against God, there is still hope for forgiveness and renewal. God's anger will not always be withheld, as we will see in Israel's later history, so to experience forgiveness enables us to move beyond our past sins and face our future with hope.

God Renews His Covenant (Exodus 34:1-9)

When Israel broke ranks with God, Moses symbolically acted this out in breaking the stone tablets on which were printed the covenant commandments. A new covenant was, therefore, required to replace the broken one.

God is like a good parent who loves his children yet also disciplines them. God cannot ignore the sin of his people. His divine nature implies both grace and punishment or mercy and judgement. God could not be God if his love were not balanced by his anger.

The trouble with sin is that it does affect others for years to come. Sin is not simply a one-night stand. Sin does pay its visit upon generation after generation. We do reap the fallout of our parents' sin and the sin of our parents' parents.

The good news of both the Old and New Testaments is that God loves us despite our "stiffnecked" behavior. God stands with open arms to welcome us back from our wanderings. When we bow in worship and acknowledge God as Father and Christ as Savior, we are free to walk through life pardoned of sin.

And if God so freely forgives us, aren't we called to forgive others of their broken covenants and trespasses against us?

Dr. Trimyer is chaplain at Burnham Hospital in Champaign, Illinois (WLYP).

Thought for the Day

Letter
Writer concerned with parade

Dear Editor:

Let me start by saying that I have the utmost respect for the Appomattox County Sheriff's Department. However, on Friday, Oct. 8, the Sheriff's Department committed a most negligent act for a responsible office.

The students at Appomattox County High School had worked long hard hours to prepare floats and other entries for the Homecoming Parade which was scheduled for 5:00 on Friday afternoon. The ACHS Band was to lead the parade as is customary. Everyone had made arrangements to be there ready to go at 5:00 as scheduled. (Have you ever considered what goes in to getting more than 60 band members with instruments assembled at a certain time and place.) Many parents and friends took off work early to enjoy the parade.

At twenty minutes until 5:00, while the floats were being placed, the Sheriff's Department proceeded with the parade, leaving the Band who was to lead the parade! In addition, they left the ACHS Cheerleaders and several of the younger students from other schools who were scheduled to ride on floats.

Even if everyone had been in position at twenty until 5:00, why would you even consider starting a parade twenty minutes early -- twenty minutes late, maybe -- not twenty minutes early!

I feel that our students deserve more respect than what was shown to them. Not only was their parade fouled up, but they were rerouted down a back alley rather than going down Main Street.

On Saturday, a very good Railroad Day Parade was presented twenty minutes late and right down Main Street. Why shouldn't our students have been given equal consideration?

Sincerely,
Linda S. Seay

Get poinsettias ready

By SHIRLEY W. WALTON
Extension Agent

If you have been nursing a poinsettia from last Christmas, now is the time to begin giving the plant 14 hours of continuous darkness daily. Night temperatures should be between 60 to 70° F. During the daytime, the plant must have direct light from six to eight hours.

For the 14 hours of darkness, you can place the plant in a dark closet in the evening or cover it with a cardboard box. Any artificial light at night will delay or inhibit the natural flower bud setting process and that will mean no red, pink or white poinsettias for Christmas unless you buy new ones.

October is also the time to start doing something about your spring flowering bulbs. If you want them to bloom inside around Valentine's Day, the easiest bulbs to force are crocus, hyacinths, narcissus, scilla and tulips. Forcing bulbs includes two phases. In the first phase, the bulb develops buds and roots and in the second phase they bloom.

Start the first phase in October or early November. Plant the bulbs in pots and keep them at a temperature of 40° F. for eight to twelve weeks. You can keep the pots outdoors or indoors. If indoors, the room must be dark and kept at 40°. Water bulbs every day. The second phase begins about mid-January. After shoots are well out of the necks of the bulbs, bring the bulbs into a cool, bright room that you can keep at 55°. They will bloom in about one month.

Perhaps an easier way to start the bulbs into developing buds and roots is to refrigerate bulbs such as crocus, hyacinths, narcissus and tulips at 40° for two months instead of planting them in pots. Be careful that somebody doesn't mistake them for a midnight snack.

After two months, plant the bulbs in bowls and put into a cool, bright room at 55°. They will bloom in about one month. You should discard the bulbs that you forced to bloom. They are too pooped to ever do their best again. They are not bulbs you save and use over.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call 352-8244 or you may write P.O. Box 488, Appomattox,VA 24522. It is always a pleasure to hear from you and to help you.

Have a good week!

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Tomato Relish

4 cups chopped onions
8-10 cups green tomatoes (diced in ½" pieces)
4 cups chopped cabbage (½" pieces)
12 green peppers (5-½ cups chopped)
6 red peppers (sweet) 2¾ cups chopped)
6 cups sugar
3-4 tablespoons mustard seed
2 tablespoons celery seed
1½ teaspoons tumeric
4 cups vinegar (cider vinegar)
2 cups water
½ cup salt

1. Chop all vegetables and soak overnight in water and salt in cool place.
2. Wash the vegetables with plenty of cold water. Drain vegetables well.

Heat vinegar, sugar, spices to boiling point and add vegetables.

4. Cook "along good" for about 20-30 minutes (until juice looks a little thick.)
5. Put in jars while hot (not necessary to seal).

Yield: 6-9 pints

Many thanks to Mrs. Colleen Whitaker (Jeanne Clabough's mother from Farmville) for sharing this delicious recipe with us. It is so good you will want to "snitch" it straight from the jar!

Domestic violence is focus of awareness week

Governor Charles S. Robb has recognized the week of Oct. 10, 1982 as "Domestic Violence Awareness Week in Virginia. This week has been named in conjunction with a nationwide "unity day" for victims of family violence to be held on Sat., Oct. 16.

Domestic violence, or spouse abuse, is defined as the recurring physical or psychological abuse between a husband and wife or man and woman living together. In the first six months of 1982 almost 5,000 Virginia women sought help as victims of domestic violence according to Virginia Department of Social Services. The same source showed that over 1,800 women and children all over the State were sheltered during the same period. This figure probably represents only a small percentage of the spouse abuse cases in Virginia, however, as a Louis Harris poll in Kentucky revealed that women receive shelter in approximately 2% of all occurences of spouse abuse. In all, there are 34 programs currently providing services for victims of domestic violence including 17 shelters in the State of Virginia.

Battering tends to escalate over time leading in some instances to homocide or suicide. According to the 1979 F.B.I. Uniform Crime Reports, 40% of female homocide victims are killed by family members or boyfriends. A Connecticut study showed that battering accounts for 25% of suicide attempts by women.

Virginians Against Domestic Violence was established in 1979 by citizens and professionals alarmed at the high incidence of amily violence. Its goals are to educate the public on the problem, advocate for needed legislative changes, and provide a communications link between programs working with victims.
